

THE UGLY AMERICANS

LIGHTS. CAMERA. DECEPTION.

"...a sly and shamelessly self-promoting comedy."

- Robert Koehler

THE UGLY AMERICANS

From the USA to Spain, France and Italy, "The Ugly Americans" is a hilarious look at the lure of Hollywood, telling the story of five American guys who attempt to con their way across Europe on a first class vacation by pretending to shoot a documentary for MTV. In a blending of real and re-staged footage, "The Ugly Americans" will take you on a wild journey never before traveled -- all on somebody else's dime -- and leave you questioning what you have just witnessed with your own eyes.

THE AMERICANS ARE COMING! THE AMERICANS ARE COMING!

THE UGLY AMERICANS

From comedy team Sheldon Collins and Justin Jogan comes a wild mockumentary about five American guys stealing their way through Europe by posing as Hollywood filmmakers.

Broke and down on their luck, but aware of the instant magnetism of a camera in any crowd, these five slackers con their American travel agency into free tickets to the Old Continent. "After all," the preening travel agent points out, "I was a top drama student in school."

This starts the ball rolling through country after country, amidst starstruck helpers and European beauties, ending in countless close calls with the law, the authorities -- and the truth.

Skydiving and bullfighting one day, deported from the country the next, these ugly Americans take it to the limit and beyond -- from the wildest parties on the Riviera to the most life threatening moments with the Italian mafia, staking out the ultimate thrill ride and con job that will leave you questioning: "Holy sh*t...is this for real?"
